Some Things the Fresh-water Sailor Must Learn In the Service.

Their experiences have been those of every civilian who enters the navai service in acquiring the real saity flavor of the sea. The moment he steps foot the sea. The very first thing he notices is that the cardinal points of his home compass are lost to him. He no longer goes upstairs, but on deck. For downstairs he goes below; and instead of front and rear he finds that in naval parlance they are fore and ext.

THE QUARTER DECK COURT.

It is here that the captain holds sway and the officer of the deck, who is in charge of the entire ship during his watch, issues his orders. Court is heid here near the mainmast, which is the forward boundary of the quarter-deck, and the long list of punishments for infractions of naval laws, are meted out to the offenders.

In former years commanders of naval vessels had greater latitude in the matter of punishments than today.

matter of pumehments than today, When flogging and keelthulling were in vogue a captain could sentence one of his crew to almost anything, but now rules and regulations issued from Washington cover the majority of cases. It is only for minor offenses that the commander of a man-of-war can distribute justice.

He generally holds court on the

To the casual observer these would seem snap-shot judgments, but in fact they have been determined beforehand in an interview with the executive officer. When a case is grave enough to warrant a more severe punishment, the offender is placed under and form what has long been known as a "Foo-foo" band.

To these who have had experience, the sois mission of these "Foo-foo" bands seems to be the murder of all peace and quiet. The band, consisting generally of a couple of guitars, a banjo, tamborine snare drum, several brass horns and a triangle or two, assembles on the forecastle after supper and plays a weird collection of airs, to the satisfaction of the members and the great amusement of neighboring and plays a weird collection of airs, to the satisfaction of the members and the great amusement of neighboring ships. It is really a harmless diversion, and the sounding of tapa at 9:20 keeps of from becoming a burden.

The music of the "Foo-foo" band is charming compared to that rendered by the accordion players found on every ship. Accordions are known as "in and out liggers" in the service, and they are generally played by Scandination members of the crew. If there is anything more delerul or annoying than a banish air played on a German occordion, it is yet to be found. There is a tradition in the service that many years ago a marine attached to one of our warships was foothardy enough to practice on a flute one evening. He practice on a flute one evening. He practice on a flute one evening. He remediate points.

Allied to music as a means of amusement is dancing. Sailors are naturally nimble-feeted, and it does not take long for them to acquire the art. After the smoking lamp is lighted in the evening on board the flagship, the band, using stringed instruments, plays popular airs and the port gangway is given over to stringed instruments, plays popular and and the port gangway is given over to the members of the crew who wish to dance. Stag parties only are allowed except when the officers give a dance and reception to their fair friends ashore. In quadrilles and all square dances the "lady" is designated by a piece of spun yarn fastened about the left arm.

DINNER INSPECTION.

It is a far cry from music and daneing to the inspection of bean soup and salt horse, but in treating of the oddisalt horse, but in treating of the oddi-ties of naval life a certain ceremony daily enacted on board Uncle Sam's warships must not be passed over. In these latter days the United States gov-ernment looks well after the commis-sary department of the navy. Contractors are required to furnish good food and the naval cooks are com-relled to cook it in a maintable man-

SHIPBOARD DIVERSIONS.

In time of peace the monotony of shipboard life is felt to a considerable extent by the four or five hundred men crowded in the confined space representing the modern battleship or cruise. The many hours between 5:29 in the morning and 9:29 at night are not all taken up with work and drills, and the team belonging to the department of the Platte. In 1892 he again carried off the first medal in the same department with a score that has never partment with a score that has never been beaten or even equalled since. This famous score was 630 points out of a possible 560. Later, at Fort Sheridan, Chicago, he captured the first-class gold medal for moving target practice, the object being at a distance of 890 yards and moving as fast as a man moves in ordinary walking, these refer yards and moving as fast as a man moves in ordinary walking—three miles an hour. In 1893 he was awarded the first "distinguished marksman" gold trophy, the Buffalo medal. This is the greatest honor possible to a marksman in the army. His score was 621 points out of a possible 800.

These prizes were all won with a Springfield rifle. There has been no contest since the new Krag-Jorgensen rifle was introduced in 1894. However, Davidson is willing to try the new rifle.

This crack sharpshooter is also famous as the most rapid marksman in the army. In what is known as a half saw back position in a skirmish he has fired an average of 12 shots in 30 seconds, while others could discharge only seven in the same time. While making these rapid shots he holds his gun in a peculiar position, which has caused him to be known throughout the army as "Gunsling Dick."

A remarkable fact in connection with this "wizard of the rifle," by the way, is that he has very weak eyes.
